1 INTRODUCTION

This document specifies the generic conditions for retrieving support services and efforts by STACKFORCE.

By ordering a support model (please refer to section 4) resp. by signing another contract with STACKFORCE that includes a support model, the customer agrees with all conditions specified in this document, unless stated differently in the related quotation resp. contract.

Support by STACKFORCE...

...is not limited to advice services. It might also include:

- small programming
- testing
- debugging
- training
- ...

2 THE ESSENTIALS IN BRIEF

General point of contact for all support-related requests: support@stackforce.com.

Documentation and tracking of support requests within a STACKFORCE internal ticket system.

Initial support proposal¹ within two business days² against remuneration of effort up to two person-hours⁴.

Support provision via phone, web-conferences, or e-mail during STACKFORCE business hours⁴.

(Personal meetings and business trips are not envisaged in general but could be offered separately.)

Assignment of one engineer being responsible for the thorough execution.

¹ STACKFORCE may reject the processing of support requests that are exceeding an effort of five person-days per month.

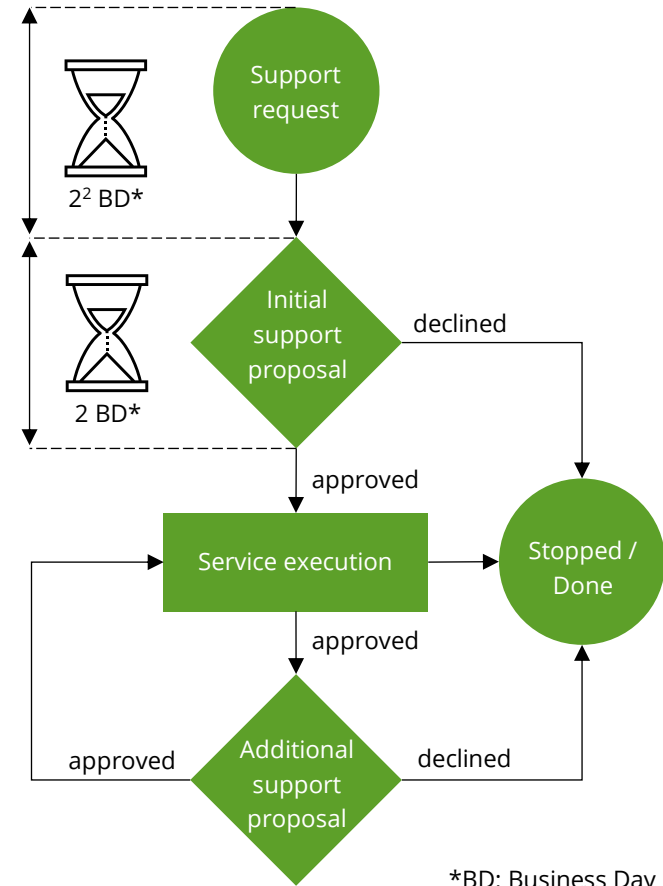

² For specific agreements (e.g. License Packages), the reaction time may deviate from this document and is then specified within the related documents / quotation.

³ The customer accepts up to two person-hours of effort at STACKFORCE according to the current standard rates per request by default without the need for approval.

⁴ STACKFORCE business hours are specified in STACKFORCE's "General Terms and Conditions" document, which is available on our website stackforce.com or upon request at info@stackforce.com.

3 SUPPORT WORKFLOW

1. During normal business hours, STACKFORCE receives a support request from an authorized person at the customer.
2. Within two business days² after the receipt, STACKFORCE will assess the request and provide first feedback including an effort estimation and a service period for the support, possible at the time of the feedback.
For this first evaluation per request, the customer accepts remuneration up to two person-hours of effort according to the current standard rates without the need for approval.
3. Based on feedback and effort estimation, the customer will decide within two business days⁵:
 - a. Approved: STACKFORCE will provide support within the confirmed service period.
 - b. Declined: The support request will be rejected and closed immediately (Up to two person-hours will be charged to the budget though for first evaluation as mentioned above.).
4. In case STACKFORCE recognizes unforeseen issues preventing to keep efforts within initially approved budget, STACKFORCE will immediately inform the customer⁶. Based on this updated effort estimation, the customer will decide:
 - a. Approved: The customer accepts the updated overall effort estimation and STACKFORCE continues with the processing of the support request.
 - b. Declined: The support case processing is stopped and already spent efforts will be charged to the budget.

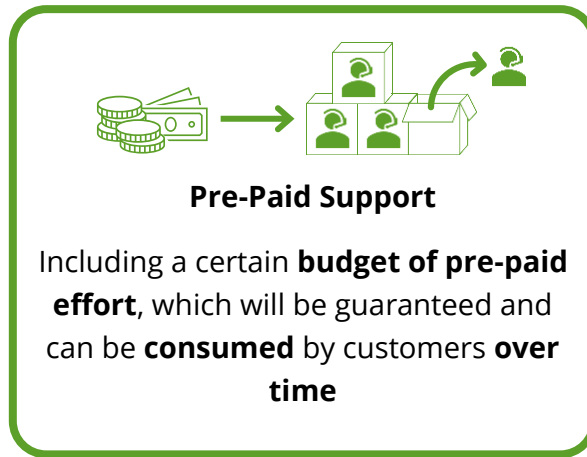

*BD: Business Day

⁵ If the customer approves later than two business days after the initial support proposal, STACKFORCE may refuse support or propose a new service period.

⁶ STACKFORCE may reject or postpone to continue processing of a support request that already has been approved by the customer, in case a required update of the effort estimation leads to an overall effort of more than five person-days for this support request.

4 PRE-PAID SUPPORT MODEL

Payment

Payment must happen in advance (pre-paid) and is not affecting the expiration date.

Expiration of effort budget

Termination

A “Pre-Paid Support” model will be canceled automatically, either

- once the budget has been consumed complete, or
- latest upon expiration of the budget.

Continuation

When 100% of the hours included in the “Pre-Paid Support” have been consumed, no further effort can be spent, until either

- another “Pre-Paid Support” has been ordered and paid resp. signed, or
